Long Live the Great July 27 Victory Day!
The Great Heroic Spirit of the Victorious Wartime Generation
Will Be Brilliantly Carried Forward

Speech delivered by Kim Jong Un at the Seventh National Conference of War Veterans
July 27, 2021

Esteemed comrade war veterans,

As I am seeing you again, an elder generation of our revolution whom we always respect and regard as our role models, and celebrating the great Victory Day for our motherland with you, I cannot suppress the surging happiness and emotion. Our already glorious war veterans, who created the legendary tale of miraculous heroic era.

The feats which the victorious wartime generation, the second generation of our revolution, performed shine brilliantly as a historic landmark of great significance in the glorious course of development of our Republic. All that is valuable for our powerful and beautiful Korea is linked to the feats of the great generation represented by you. The free life of the tens of millions of our people, our genuine system, our beautiful mountains and rivers, our vast fertile plains and our precious natural resources—all these are unthinkable separated from the feats performed by the numerous warriors who defended every inch of the land of their country at the cost of their blood and lives.

As the courageous defenders of the country in the 1950s repulsed the invasion of the brigandish US imperialists at the cost of their lives, their descendents of several generations have been able to enjoy up to now the dignity of an independent people free from sufferings of slaves. The fighting spirit which produced the great victory and miracle will never fade out no matter how much time may pass, and it constitutes an inexhaustible source that produces new victories and miracles. When we recall the great heroic spirit displayed by the victorious wartime generation, we can find nothing that does not strike the world people with wonder and move their hearts. Thanks to the honourable constructors who displayed fortitude with their belts still tightened in the struggle against time, heroic Korea gained even more brilliant image—Chollima Korea—while others were taking only one step forward. Thanks to the self-sacrificing and devoted struggle of the victorious wartime generation, the iron truth of Juche that it is possible to create a new life even on the debris and be well off as long as there is the people, the territory, the Party and the government has been proved to be a brilliant reality.

In every decade of socialist construction our war veterans and people of wartime merits, always thinking about whether they were living as they had done in the war days when they had fought shedding blood and braving hails of bullets and gunfire, worked at their posts invariably and have led the rising generations to live and struggle uprightly and steadfastly. This is the lofty spiritual world of the victorious wartime generation, which we all respect and appreciate.

By inheriting the great heroic spirit of the victorious wartime generation, our Party and people have been able to overcome the arduous trials in the struggle for defending socialism, which were virtually as challenging as several wars, and perform with credit the great tasks facing the revolution.

The defenders and builders of the country in the 1950s, who defended our glorious DPRK with honour and created an immortal heroic spirit that has to be carried forward generation by generation, are, indeed, benevolent persons and excellent teachers who deserve to be praised and emulated for generations to come.

Comrades,

Our people and new generations have a special feeling of dignity and pride which cannot be compared to anything in the world, that they are the descendants of the great victorious wartime generation.

The honourable mission of the descendants of the great victorious wartime generation is to make the country, which was defended and built by the forerunners, stronger and prosperous for ever by brilliantly carrying forward the great tradition of victory and heroic spirit which were created under the leadership of the great leaders and the great Party.

The generation, who are fully aware of this sacred historic mission and duty, can never degenerate or collapse, but advance valiantly and stoutly.

Whenever we are faced with a new challenge and gigantic tasks, we are reminded of the elder generation of the revolution, the victorious wartime generation, who faced earlier challenges and tasks more formidable than the current ones and coped with them.

Today the difficulties and obstacles caused by the world health crisis unprecedented in history and the protracted blockade are no less harsh for us than those in the wartime situation.

However, just as the victorious wartime generation displayed the greatest courage and brought about the greatest victory and honour in the face of the greatest national trials, so our generation, by carrying forward the fine tradition, will turn the present difficulties into a fresh greater victory.

Even if we may encounter worse hardships than now on the road of building a powerful socialist country, we will never stop but rush forward with vigour towards the struggle objectives we set by carrying forward the heroic spirit of the victorious wartime generation.

We will, without fail, turn this land, to which the warriors of the war dedicated their priceless lives and the war veterans have devoted their lifelong honest efforts of patriotism, into a prosperous and powerful country where all the people enjoy happiness with nothing to envy.

To this end, our Party is going to make sure that the valuable ideological and spiritual wealth of the victorious wartime generation becomes an integral part of all the people, service personnel and rising generations and the nourishment for their genuine life and struggle.

We will ensure that the staunch revolutionary spirit with which that generation placed absolute trust in our Party alone and carried out its decisions at the cost of their lives, the death-defying spirit with which they never limited to sacrifice their lives with every confidence in their strength and the victory when the country was at the crossroads of life or death, the indomitable fighting spirit with which they vigorously turned out in rehabilitation and construction braving hardships and difficulties, and the ennobling collectivist spirit with which they created a fresh socialist life by supporting and caring for one another even in the teeth of hardships remain alive and pulsate in today’s struggle and life.

We will ensure that everyone never forgets the history of brilliant victories and struggle in the Fatherland Liberation War, the postwar rehabilitation and the era of the grand Chollima upsurge, all of which are an excellent textbook of ardent patriotism, that every work place and military post always resonates with the wartime songs and songs of creation and construction, and that fresh miracles and feats are continuously created amid the practical struggle for implementing the Party’s policies.

Dear comrade war veterans,

With the historic Eighth Party Congress as a momentum, the cause of building socialism of our own style has greeted a new dynamic era and the whole country is vibrant with a soaring spirit.

Our revolutionary armed forces are fully prepared to cope with any change of the situation or any threat and stand firmly at the outposts of national defence and socialist construction while consolidating their might to be ever-more invincible by dint of historic combat spirit and ennobling political and moral traits.

Tens of thousands of persons of younger generation, carrying forward the excellent spirit and mettle of the victorious wartime generation, volunteer to work at the fronts at the call of the Party.

The gains of the revolution the victorious wartime generation won at the cost of blood remain stout, and the future of our state and our socialist cause is bright.

Even if you do nothing and only if you remain healthy, it is a great inspiration to our Party and people and a great encouragement to our revolution.

On the occasion of 68th anniversary of the victory of the great Fatherland Liberation War, I extend once again my heartfelt thanks to our precious war veterans and people of wartime merits and wish every one of you a long life in good health.

The great heroic spirit of the victorious wartime generation will shine for ever and be carried forward stoutly.

Long live the great July 27 Victory Day!

Long live our great motherland, the Democratic People’s Republic of Korea!

On the occasion of the Day of Korea’s Liberation (August 15), the Korean people recollect the immortal exploits President Kim Il Sung performed in opening the way to a new life of the nation.

In the first half of the last century the Korean nation was suffering great distress under the Japanese military occupation. At that time Kim Il Sung declared an all-out war against Japanese aggressors and led the national liberation struggle.

He advanced the original line of waging an armed struggle with guerrilla warfare as its main form and founded on April 25, 1932 the Anti-Japanese People’s Guerrilla Army (later reorganized into Korean People’s Revolutionary Army), the first revolutionary armed force of the Korean people.

Confrontation between the KPRA, without the backing of a state, and Japanese imperialism, a self-styled leader of Asia, was a continuation of arduous and difficult struggle.

Despite manifold trials and hardship accompanied by fierce battles with tenacious enemy, heartrending sacrifices, biting cold and hunger, and so on, the Korean Japanese imperialism that had dreamed of world domination, bragging of being the “leader” of Asia, made an unconditional surrender on August 15, 1945 people waged the national liberation struggle without letup under the leadership of Kim Il Sung.
By firmly maintaining the juche-oriented stand in the whole course of the anti-Japanese armed struggle, Kim Il Sung set forth correct lines, strategies and tactics, and achieved unity of the anti-Japanese armed force in ideology, purpose and moral obligation with his noblest love for and trust in revolutionary comrades.
He also persuaded everybody, who loved the country and the nation, to commit themselves to the struggle for national liberation.
On the basis of the motive force strengthened with the KPRA as the core, he issued an order of launching the general offensive for national liberation on August 9, 1945.
According to his order, the KPRA units and all resistance forces at home and abroad turned out at once to destroy the Japanese aggressor troops and occupy the enemy administrative organs.
On August 15, 1945, Japanese imperialism declared an unconditional surrender and the Korean people was liberated from the Japanese military occupation spanning nearly half a century.
The three-thousand-ri land of Korea seethed with the delight over the liberation, and all the Korean people looked forward to the triumphal return of Kim Il Sung.
It was on October 14, 1945 that Kim Il Sung had a first meeting with the people in the homeland at the Pyongyang public playground (present Kim Il Sung Stadium) and delivered a historic speech.
Hundreds of thousands of people surged to the playground from not only Pyongyang and its outskirts but also Sarisun, Haje, Sinajju, Kanggye, Wonsan, Hamhung, and other parts of the country, and shouted thunderous cheers. The cheers were the outburst of the Korean people’s fervent gratitude to Kim Il Sung who materialized national aspiration, and the demonstration of their determination and will to turn out in the building of a new country under his leadership.
At present the Arch of Triumph stands near Kim Il Sung Stadium. It is a monument erected to pass down through the generations the revolutionary exploits of Kim Il Sung who made a triumphal return to Pyongyang after having achieved the liberation of Korea by organizing and leading the anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle.

The Korean young people are raising fierce flames of creation and innovation in keeping with the sentiment of the advancing times and fully demonstrating their resourcefulness and gallantry in an effort to implement the five-year plan set forth by the Workers’ Party of Korea.

More than 3,700 young people across the country have fulfilled their annual and first half-year production plans as of last May. Among them are young coal miners at the Chonsong Youth Coal Mine under the Sunchon Area Youth Coal-mining Complex and the Ryongdung Coal Mine under the Kujang Area Coal-mining Complex, who carried out their yearly economic plans.

Those in the light industry sector set new standards and new records in completing the annual or first half-year plan. Amid vigorous campaigns of overtaking and learning from others and swapping experience with them, the Pyongyang Kim Jong Suk Silk Mill produced its first girl worker who had carried out her annual plan until last April, and then several other workers carried out their annual plans until the middle of May. Similar achievements were also made among young workers at the Huichon Silk Mill, Sinuiju Textile Mill and Kusong Garment Factory, who accomplished their tasks for the first half-year plans.

A large number of young people have volunteered to work in major sectors of the national economy. Over a thousand young people from South Phyongan Province, and many others from Pyongyang, North and South Hamgyong provinces, Rason, Kaesong and other parts of the country volunteered to work in the rural farms, coal mines, metal and mining industries and major construction sites, thus bringing about a surge in production.

Following their suit, an increasing number of young people are leaving their hometowns to work in major construction sites, cooperative farms, and schools and clinics in mountainous villages and remote areas, adding lustre to their youthful days.

Young medical workers at the North Hamgyong Provincial People’s Hospital carried out skin grafting to save a patient from the jaws of death. Similar laudable deeds were also performed by those at Pyongyang Municipal People’s Hospital No. 2 and Sariwon People’s Hospital No. 1.

In a little more than two months after the tenth congress of the youth league, over 20,000 young people displayed laudable traits. Among them are a young man who jumped into a river to rescue a pupil, and a girl teacher visiting a child, who fails to go to kindergarten owing to poor health, to teach Korean alphabet.

Picturesque landscape of Pyongyang in lush greenness draws great admiration from everybody. Though the weather is sultry in midsummer, thick green woods and lawns, parks and pleasure grounds laid out on Moran Hill, Mts. Taesong and Ryongak and along the banks of the Taedong and Pothong rivers, deep shade cast by tall trees lining the streets, and the lawns created attractively along the roads, add conspicuous charm to the green scenery of the city.

Pyongyang is just a city in a park.

Protecting ecological environment of the earth is an issue vital to the existence and development of mankind. Greed and egoism still tempt indiscriminate exploitation of natural resources, resulting in ceaseless destruction of environment.

This calls upon us not to hesitate any longer but turn out in an effort to realize our aspiration to live happily in a better environment. Only when we endeavour to make our world beautiful and green for ourselves and the coming generations will nature present mankind with its wealth.

For Pollution-free, Clean and Green World.
The Sepho Plateau that encompasses a wide area of Sepho, Phyonggang and Ichon counties in Kangwon Province has such unfavourable weather conditions as copious rain, heavy snow and strong wind, so it had remained abandoned and been overgrown with shrubs and purple eulalia until a decade ago. But it began to undergo a tremendous change since the end of 2012, thanks to the grand plan advanced by the Workers’ Party of Korea to reclaim the plateau for the improvement of the people’s living standards.

Reclamers from all across the country buckled down to the project. They took samples at many spots in the three counties for detailed soil analysis, and, based on them, applied reasonable soil improvement methods to reclaim the wild and barren mountains and plains.

Proper livestock breeds and feed crop species of high productivity were selected, and large-scale pastures were created. Superior breeds of animals thrive.
Reclaimers created windbreaks, digging up hard fields and breaking rocks to plant trees on a large scale, and constructed bridges over the gorges and roads along the hills and valleys.

Not only buildings for livestock farming, such as those for housing animals, anti-epizootic work, and meat and dairy processing, but also dwelling houses, schools, kindergartens, nurseries, clinics and hall of culture, were constructed.

The plateau was reclaimed in less than five years into a gigantic livestock farming base which started operation in October 2017. A vast pasture of 50,000 hectares, several hundred hectares of windbreaks, a forest of 12,600 hectares to protect grassland and 2,000 km-long roads, a drainage system and reservoir were laid out.

At present, the base is exerting strenuous efforts to boost the livestock farming based on sound scientific foundations. Now the Sepho Area Livestock Economy Committee provides guidance to the livestock farming through the general control station, which monitors in real time the cultivation of the pasture, preventive observation of harmful insects, rearing of domestic animals and anti-epizootic work. In this way it is putting the livestock farming on a scientific, industrial and intensive footing.

The Sepho Animal Husbandry Institute with ten odd departments has already achieved considerable successes in solving scientific and technological problems required for boosting the livestock farming in accordance with the features of the Sepho area.

The anti-epizootic centre in the base has developed scores of vaccines and medicines for the prevention and treatment of animal diseases with medicinal herbs abundant in the area, thereby lowering the death rate of animals.

The Aeguk Cattle Farm and other livestock farms have established a scientific breeding system and introduced advanced methods to raise a larger number of superior breeds of domestic animals.

Thanks to the production cycle of crop, fish and livestock farming, the farms are expecting further increase in production. Working people in the farms are involved in the study-while-you-work system, and they are preparing themselves into competent technical and skilled personnel.

At present, large flocks of dairy cattle, sheep and goats, grazing on the vast expanse of the pasture, offer a superb view in the Sepho area.

Meat and milk produced in the base are processed into various products and sent to all parts of the country.
Pyongyang Teachers Training College was established in September 1968, with some 20 lecturers, and it has now become widely known across the country as a base for training teachers with more than a hundred lecturers. And the number of researchers has increased some 60 times.

Three years ago it was rebuilt in Mangyongdae District, Pyongyang, and its education has been put on a scientific, IT and modern footing.

At present the college’s leading lecturers are graduates from Kim Il Sung University, Kim Hyong Jik University of Education and other universities and are in their 30s.

The college has an enrolment of more than a thousand students, mostly girls in the city.

Therefore, the college is paying close attention to raising the standards of education while steadily upgrading the teaching contents and methods in keeping with the world trend of the educational development and pedagogical requirements.

Based on the practical and subdivided content of education, six courses and over 50 subjects are newly instituted, and more than 30 teaching methods are introduced.

In consideration of students lacking experience in dealing with children, the college has increased the proportion of education in the direction of improving their applicability.

The multifunctional classrooms furnished for teaching in virtual and practical situations as well as numerous teaching-aid programs developed by researchers of the college are greatly conducive to improving the educational standards and developing students’ academic qualifications.

Specialties of Hoeryong

Products made from white apricot of Hoeryong

Hard, light and uniquely-coloured glazed earthenware
Hoeryong, a city in North Hamgyong Province situated in the northernmost part of Korea, has been famous for its beautiful scenery and as a good place to live in. Before anything else, its three specialties were widely known at home and even to neighbouring countries.

White apricot and white clay are among the three specialties of Hoeryong.

Hoeryong white apricot is a cold-resistant species. Its trunk is reddish brown with dark grey tint, old branches are glossy, deep maroon with yellowish specks, and new branches are yellowish purple.

White flowers bloom in late April, and fruits are borne in early and mid-July.

Each fruit weighs about 60g and is white-yellow in the peel and light red on the surface exposed to sunlight. The flesh is light yellow, juicy and sweet and has less acid. The kernel is large, flat and round, and has medicinal properties.

White apricot of Hoeryong accounts for 90 per cent of the city’s fruit production.

Apricot trees are planted in orchards of several hundred hectares laid out along hills and valleys, and they are tended and manured in a scientific way. Old trees are replaced by young ones on a regular basis.

The trees are also planted in streets, around villages and at the roadside, which offers a picturesque scenery of blossoming white flowers in spring and a rich harvest in summer.

The fruits are processed into nutritious sweet foods and used to flavour drinks and liquors and make medicines.
Glazed Earthenware of Hoeryong

White clay of Hoeryong has long been used in making ceramics, particularly for the manufacture of white porcelain of the feudal Joson dynasty.

Glazed earthenware of Hoeryong became widely known since the days of the feudal Joson dynasty for their excellent merits in usage and artistic technology.

Ordinary glazed earthenware is usually brown in colour tinged with yellow, red, blue or black tints, but the glazed earthenware of Hoeryong is white.

Glazed earthenware of Hoeryong is widely used for preserving food and drinks.
