The Editorial Board of the Korea Pictorial introduces the sacred career and invaluable exploits of President Kim Il Sung, who devoted his all for the prosperity of the country, wellbeing of the people and the victorious advance of the cause of independence of mankind.
President Kim Il Sung was a peerlessly great leader, who led the Korean revolution beset with hardships and ordeals and created an eternal wealth of socialist Korea for its victory and prosperity.

Having authored the immortal Juche idea, the President gave solutions, irrespective of any established theories or experiences, to overall theoretical and practical problems arising in several stages of the revolutionary struggle and all the spheres of socialist construction on the Juche-oriented standpoint, thus enriching the treasure-house of the human ideology.

Already in his early days of the revolutionary struggle, he clarified that the revolution should be made by one’s own efforts by building up one’s strength, and carried out the difficult and gigantic tasks arising in the two revolutionary wars, two rounds of reconstruction and several stages of socialist construction by dint of self-reliance and self-development.

He accomplished the historic cause of building the party, the state and the army, and strengthened the Workers’ Party of Korea and the Democratic People’s Republic of Korea into powerful political weapons in carrying out socialist construction as required by the developing revolution.

He dedicated his all to the independent reunification of the country until the last moment of his life. He also conducted energetic external activities to enhance the international prestige and influence of the DPRK remarkably and rendered sincere assistance to the peoples of the world in their struggle for anti-imperialism, independence and socialism.

President Kim Il Sung provided a sure guarantee for accomplishing the cause of building a powerful socialist country down through generations by satisfactorily solving the problem of inheriting the revolutionary cause.

The revolutionary history of the working class has so far recorded a number of prominent statesmen and persons, but President Kim Il Sung was the most outstanding patriot and revolutionary who laid solid foundations for the prosperity of the country and the nation in his generation.
Mangyongdae, boasting spectacular scenery, is situated at the foot of Mangyong Hill on the bank of the Taedong River meandering through Pyongyang.

On April 15, 1912, Kim Il Sung was born at Mangyongdae.

At that time, Korea was going through the bitterest period of national tragedy owing to the military occupation of the Japanese imperialists.

The family of President Kim Il Sung handed down from generation to generation the family tradition of ardent patriotism that devoted their all without hesitation for the country and fellow countrymen.

Kim Hyong Jik, father of Kim Il Sung, was an outstanding leader of the anti-Japanese national liberation movement in Korea, who fought throughout his life, regarding Jiwon (Aim High), the indomitable revolutionary spirit of fighting through generations and achieving national liberation, as his motto.

And Kang Pan Sok, mother of Kim Il Sung, was an outstanding leader of the revolutionary women’s movement in Korea, who supported her husband and son in their revolutionary struggle and fought for the national independence and social emancipation of women.

Mangyongdae was the fertile ground for Kim Il Sung to develop his personality as a great man, and April 15 was the day that heralded the dawn of the national liberation.

So the Korean people celebrate April 15, when they greeted the greatest fortune unprecedented in their 5,000-year-long history, with splendour as the Day of the Sun.

President Kim Il Sung’s birthplace at Mangyongdae
President Kim Il Sung put forth in his teens the fighting goal full of courage and great ambition to save the destiny of the country and the nation and roused the masses of the people to the revolutionary struggle.

Convinced that he had nothing but his own strength to rely on in the days of blazing the trail of the Korean revolution, Kim Il Sung organized the Down-with-Imperialism Union, a new-type revolutionary organization, on October 17, 1926.

The DIU advanced as its immediate task the overthrow of Japanese imperialism and the liberation and independence of Korea, and as its final objective the building of socialism and communism in Korea and, further, the destruction of all imperialism and the building of communism throughout the world. With the formation of the DIU the Korean revolution advanced based on the principle of independence.

In the 1920s the revolutionary movement for independence was conducted vigorously on a worldwide scale. The reality urgently demanded a new idea to illuminate the road for the people to shape their destiny.

With a keen insight into the demand of the times and actual conditions of the national liberation movement in Korea, Kim Il Sung advanced the lines and strategic and tactical policies of the Korean revolution at the meeting held in Kalun, China, in the summer of 1930. At the meeting he clarified the principle of Juche and authored the immortal Juche idea.

The Korean revolution, which had its fresh start from the formation of the DIU, entered a new phase of development, based on the Juche-oriented revolutionary lines and scientific strategies and tactics advanced by the President.

President Kim Il Sung achieved the liberation of Korea under the banner of independence and self-reliance and set an example for the world in the national liberation struggle.

With his gifted intelligence, the President keenly realized already in his teens that the liberation of the country could not be achieved with dependence on outside forces.

So he, cherishing an unshakeable faith that the Korean revolution should be conducted by the Korean people themselves and in conformity with the actual conditions of the country, advanced the original line of waging an anti-Japanese armed struggle with guerrilla warfare as the major form. Then he founded the Korean People’s Revolutionary Army, the first revolutionary armed force in Korea, and declared the anti-Japanese war.

The anti-Japanese war waged against one million-strong army of Japanese imperialism, self-styled leader of Asia, with neither state backing nor support of a regular army was a bloody showdown unprecedented in the world history of war.

While preparing the KPRA politically and ideologically into a staunch fighting rank that firmly believed in their strength and fought against aggressors, he united the patriotic forces of all social strata under the banner of anti-Japanese struggle.

During the bloody struggle for national liberation, he experienced indescribable hardships.

He lost his parents and younger brother, and also suffered severe heartache when he buried his comrades-in-arms in the frozen earth while breaking through the thick encirclement of the enemy.

However, he led the arduous anti-Japanese war in the vanguard, overcoming all those hardships with a high sense of responsibility that if they were frustrated, Korea could never be revived, in the spirit of fortitude with which to destroy the enemy and win back the country at any cost, and with the affection for and trust in comrades and people.

When he fought in the vast expanse of the Mt Paektu area, with steel-strong faith, will, courage and confidence and by dint of his adroit military tactics of appearing from out of nowhere and disappearing again, the enemy trembled in constant fear but all the Korean people revered him as the sun of the nation and the saviour of their destiny.

The anti-Japanese fighters who grew up into revolutionaries in his embrace fought death-defyingly with firm determination to destroy the enemy at any cost and dedicated their youth and life without hesitation.

Upholding the line of national resistance advanced by the President, Korean patriots and other people turned out in the war against the Japanese imperialists and were closely rallied under the banner of the anti-Japanese national united front.

In the historic period when the great event of national liberation was drawing near, Kim Il Sung put forward the strategic plan of combining the general offensive of the KPRA with an all-people uprising and joint operations behind enemy lines, and made strenuous efforts for its implementation.

He saw to it that secret camps and resistance organizations were expanded in the homeland and reconnaissance activities conducted briskly in the enemy rear, in order to achieve the country’s liberation through nationwide resistance with the KPRA as the leadership core.

On the order of Kim Il Sung, the KPRA units made a thrust into the homeland, like surging waves, wiping out the Japanese aggressor troops, and in response to them, people’s armed corps and armed resistance organizations attacked the enemy and destroyed their establishments.

On August 15, 1945, the Japanese imperialists surrendered and the whole country resounded with the cheers for national liberation.

Under the leadership of Kim Il Sung, a peerless patriot, the Korean people greeted the day of national liberation they had been awaiting so eagerly.
The Korean people greeted the historic day of national liberation, thanks to the victory in the anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle led by Kim Il Sung.
Marking the 110th birth anniversary of President Kim Il Sung, the Korean people recollect undying exploits he performed in saving the destiny of the nation and accomplishing the cause of building the party, the army and the state for the prosperity of the country.

Kim Il Sung embarked on the road of revolutionary struggle early in his teens and formed the Down-with-Imperialism Union (DIU) on October 17, 1926, which served as the start of the building of a revolutionary party in Korea.

Having advanced an original policy for founding a party by setting up basic party organizations with young communists of the new generation as the backbone and steadily expanding them, he formed the first party organization, the Society for Rallying Comrades, in July 1930.

He consolidated the organizational and ideological foundations for party building by forming party organizations in the units of the Korean People’s Revolutionary Army and in broad areas at home and abroad and establishing the guidance system for them.

As a result, the work of founding the party was successfully promoted immediately after Korea was liberated (August 15, 1945), and the historic inaugural meeting of the party was held in October 1945.

Reflecting the ardent desire of all the Party members and other people he set up the Central Organizing Committee of the Communist Party of North Korea and solemnly proclaimed the founding of a Juche-type revolutionary party which he prepared from the days of the anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle.

The Korean People’s Army was founded on February 8, 1948. Kim Il Sung organized the Korean People’s Revolutionary Army to win back the country and finally achieved the historic cause of national liberation.

After Korea’s liberation he put forth the line of building a regular revolutionary armed force and wisely led the efforts for its implementation.

He ensured that the Pyongyang Institute and the Central Security Officers School were established, the Juche-oriented military education system set up, and a lot of military and political cadres who would play the core role in the regular revolutionary army trained. And he personally selected the site for building the first munitions factory so as to lay the material and technological foundations for building a regular armed force.

Under his guidance the Korean People’s Army that has inherited the anti-Japanese revolutionary traditions and provided a firm military guarantee for the dignity and might of the country was founded.

Kim Il Sung founded the Democratic People’s Republic of Korea, thus giving prominence to the Korean people as genuine masters of the state and society for the first time in its 5 000-year-long history.

After Korea’s liberation the building of a new society was briskly waged in the northern part of Korea under his leadership.

Kim Il Sung established the Provisional People’s Committee of North Korea, a genuine central power organ for the people, in February 1946. And, based on the successful elections of members of the provincial, city and county people’s committees, he founded the People’s Assembly of North Korea and organized the People’s Committee of North Korea in February 1947.

However, the US imperialists, who occupied the southern part of the country, enforced the military rule and disbanded the people’s committees that had been set up in south Korea, thereby infringing upon the aspiration and demand of the Korean people for the building of an independent state.

To cope with the prevailing situation, the Second Congress of the Workers’ Party of North Korea was held in March 1948, in which Kim Il Sung stated that a joint conference of representatives of all democratic political parties and public organizations in the north and south of Korea should be convened to adopt a detailed plan and measures for hastening the establishment of a unified, democratic state.
Accordingly, the Joint Conference of Representatives of Political Parties and Public Organizations in North and South Korea was held in April 1948, which was attended by 693 representatives from 56 political parties and public organizations. The joint conference adopted the Decision on the Political Situation in Korea, which carried a resolution on opposing separate elections in South Korea and establishing a unified central government.

In disregard of the Korean people’s unanimous denunciation and opposition, the US imperialists forced separate elections in South Korea in May 1948. To tide over the crisis of national division, the President convened a conference of leaders of political parties and public organizations in the north and south of Korea and set forth the policy of establishing an all-Korea government by holding a north-south general election without delay.

Nationwide discussion was made on the draft Constitution, and the north-south general election for the founding of the Republic was held on August 25, 1948. In North Korea 99.97 per cent of the entire electorate participated in the election to elect 212 deputies to the Supreme People’s Assembly, and in South Korea 77.52 per cent of the entire electorate took part in the election and returned 1,080 people’s representatives, who held the people’s representative conference of South Korea to elect 360 deputies to the Supreme People’s Assembly.

In September 1948 the First Session of the Supreme People’s Assembly of the Democratic People’s Republic of Korea was held in Pyongyang and the founding of the DPRK was declared.

The great exploits President Kim Il Sung performed in building the party, the army and the state have become solid foundations and the banner of eternal victory for propelling the comprehensive development of socialist Korea.

Proclamation of the founding of the DPRK

Accordingly, the Joint Conference of Representatives of Political Parties and Public Organizations in North and South Korea was held in April 1948, which was attended by 693 representatives from 56 political parties and public organizations. The joint conference adopted the Decision on the Political Situation in Korea, which carried a resolution on opposing separate elections in South Korea and establishing a unified central government.

In disregard of the Korean people’s unanimous denunciation and opposition, the US imperialists forced separate elections in South Korea in May 1948. To tide over the crisis of national division, the President convened a conference of leaders of political parties and public organizations in the north and south of Korea and set forth the policy of establishing an all-Korea government by holding a north-south general election without delay.

President Kim Il Sung was an ever-victorious, iron-willed commander who led to victory the righteous Fatherland Liberation War (June 25, 1950-July 27, 1953) to defend the sovereignty and independence of the Democratic People’s Republic of Korea.

The United States, out of its sinister desire to stifle the Republic in its bud and realize the ambition for world supremacy, unleashed a war against the DPRK, which was grave, arduous trials for the latter decisive of the destiny of its people.

By common sense it was hard to imagine for the DPRK, which was less than two years after founding, to fight a modern war against the imperialist forces of aggression. The imperialist aggressors threw into the war millions-strong armed force and colossal amounts of war materiel and applied all sorts of most atrocious and brutal methods unprecedented in the world history of warfare.

No one in the world anticipated that the fledgling DPRK would become the winner in this war, which was in effect a confrontation between rifle and atomic bomb.

However, the Korean people, firmly rallied behind Kim Il Sung, benefactor of the national liberation, wrought military miracle in the 20th century by defeating US imperialism, having boasted of its being the strongest in the world, and its vassal forces. During the arduous three-year war, Kim Il Sung led the Korean army and people, shoulderin all the burdens of state affairs and braving manifold trials and ordeals.

Putting forward the slogan “Everything for victory in the war!” he inspired the whole Party, the entire army and all the people to turn out in the struggle for defending the country and led the People’s Army to frustrate the enemy’s numerical and technical superiority by means of political and moral, strategic and tactical superiority. He ensured that the Party was strengthened organizationally and ideologically as required by the wartime conditions and Party and power organs... implemented the class and mass lines in a thoroughgoing way, thus remarkably enhancing the politico-ideological might of the ranks.

Seeing through the prevailing situation, the balance of power between the warring sides, and weak points of the enemy at every stage of war with uncommon military wisdom and insight, he advanced Korean-style strategy and tactics to give heavy blows to the aggressors and bring about a radical turn in the victory of war.

Thanks to his adroit tactics, including continuous strike and encirclement and annihilation operations on all fronts, formation of a second front by regular army units in the enemy’s rear, positive positional defence warfare relying on tunnels, and movements of anti-aircraft and anti-tank teams, the so-called invincible divisions and crack units of the enemy were destroyed one after another.

Outstanding military leadership of Kim Il Sung displayed in frustrating military operations and offensives devised by self-appointed imperialist military strategists and inflicting an ignominious defeat on the aggressors advocating the theory of all-powerful weaponry wins admiration of military experts even at present.

The grim war days also witnessed ennobling affection of the President unheard-of in the history of human warfare. Saying that each of the People’s Army soldiers was his precious revolutionary comrade who could never be bartered with hundreds or thousands of enemies, he bestowed benevolence on them, paid close attention to the people’s farming and living conditions and took warm care of war orphans.

Under his loving care, a KPA regiment was dispatched to the enemy area to rescue the family of a young soldier, frontline rest homes were established for soldiers, and people-oriented policies like universal free medical care system were enforced.

When he was planning a new military operation or faced with a critical situation, he always went to see his soldiers and people, listening to their opinions and finding best solutions of turning misfortune into blessing and adversity into prosperity, and worked out the victorious future of the country.

He went to the frontline areas such as Seoul, Suwon, Kwangju and Mt Jihye to encourage the soldiers to display peerless valour in battles, and reflected simple opinions of people whom he met on his field guidance trips in the state policies. His leadership based on the people served as a motive force that brought about victory in the war.

By repulsing the imperialist aggressors and emerging victorious in the Fatherland Liberation War, the DPRK reliably safeguarded its independence and sovereignty. It also won worldwide fame as a heroic country and its people, as the heroic people.

The Korean people frustrated the sinister attempt of the imperialists to ignite the third world war and stamp out independence, peace and socialism, and opened up a new era of the anti-imperialist struggle.

The tradition of emerging victorious by dint of Juche-oriented strategies and tactics was carried forward amid the flames of the war, and valuable treasures for guaranteeing the independent development and prosperity of the country provided.

A fundamental change was effected in the Korean people’s ideological and spiritual life, and an ennobling fighting spirit to be carried forward down through generations created.

With such a heroic spirit that cannot be compared to millions of tons of gold, Korean people have achieved one victory after another in the war without gunshot against imperialism for scores of years after the war and adorned their history with epochal creation and changes.

Immortal exploits of President Kim Il Sung, who led the Fatherland Liberation War to victory, thus saving the destiny of the country and the nation again and creating the ever-victorious history and tradition of Juche Korea, will be remembered for all eternity.

President Kim Il Sung was the genius of creation and construction, who established the Juche-oriented socialist country which is independent in politics, self-sufficient in the economy and self-reliant in defence.

When the Fatherland Liberation War (June 1950-July 1953) ended in victory for the DPRK, Kim Il Sung mobilized all the people in the struggle for postwar rehabilitation and accomplishment of the cause of socialism.

At a plenary meeting of the Central Committee of the Workers’ Party of Korea in April 1955 the President published the theses on the nature and tasks of the Korean revolution and set forth the task of promoting the socialist revolution on a full scale in the northern part of Korea.

Under his leadership the Korean people turned out in the struggle for laying the foundations of socialism.

The President put forward original lines of agricultural cooperativization and socialist transformation of private trade and industry and wisely led the efforts for implementing them and laying the foundations of socialist industrialization.

With a firm determination to push forward the socialist construction by enlisting the strength of the masses of the people, he visited the then Kangson Steel Plant in December 1956. Saying earnestly that the Party trusts the working class, the main force of the revolution, and is pinning its hopes on them and that if they produce 10,000 tons more of steel, it will greatly help the country, he roused them for an upswing in the production.

The President continued his on-site guidance trips to numerous factories, enterprises, farms and fishing villages, including Hwanghae Iron Works (today’s Hwanghae Iron and Steel Complex), Hungnam and Sinpho areas, and Mundok and Sukchon counties, inspiring the people across the country to a new revolutionary upsurge.

In this process the Chollima Movement started as a great revolutionary movement to sweep away everything old-fashioned from all spheres of the economy, culture, ideology and morality, and constantly make innovations and accelerate socialist construction at an unprecedented rate.

The President visited the Kangson Steel Plant again in February 1959 to kindle the flames of the Chollima Workteam Movement, and... led the effort to expand the movement, conducted with a workteam as a unit, to workshops and factories, and further to all fields of the economy and culture.

Under his wise leadership the Chollima Workteam Movement developed into a grand onward movement embracing the broad masses of the people of the country.

In those days powerful bases of heavy industry, centred on the machine-building industry, and of light industry were created, and the solid foundations for socialist industrialization were laid. And the DPRK was turned into a socialist industrial and agricultural state with self-supporting national economy. The political and ideological unity of all the people was further strengthened on a new socialist foundation and the state and social system consolidated.

President Kim Il Sung advanced the task for all-round construction of socialism at the Fourth Congress of the WPK held in September 1961, and roused all the people for its implementation.

He saw to it that the guidance and management should be improved in all sectors as required by the new reality in which the scale of the economic activities grew incomparably larger and the political enthusiasm of the masses enhanced after the establishment of the socialist system, thus vigorously advancing the socialist revolution.

The line of simultaneously developing the national economy and defence put forth by the President in December 1962 served as a militant banner for safeguarding the revolutionary achievements and expediting socialist construction successfully, and powerfully propelled the advance of the Korean revolution.

The President, relying on the foundations of the self-supporting national industry and the material bases laid for introducing modern technology into all branches of the national economy, wisely led the effort to create an independent modern industry which was comprehensively developed and equipped with solid raw material base of its own and the latest technology, and to carry out the overall technological reconstruction of the national economy.

Always paying close attention to correctly solving the rural question in the whole course of leading the revolution, the President

Independent modern industry was established to produce large vessels, heavy-duty trucks and other machines and facilities needed in the various sectors of the national economy.
made public the theses on the socialist rural question at the Eighth Plenary Meeting of the Fourth Central Committee of the WPK in February 1964 and made strenuous efforts for its implementation, thus bringing about an epochal change in rural construction.

He solved all the problems arising in the revolution and construction by enlisting the strength of the people. In June 1967 he visited the then Ryongsong Machine Plant and inspired the workers there to stand in the van of the struggle to carry out the line of building the economy and defence simultaneously, and accomplish the socialist industrialization, by bringing about a great revolutionary upsurge once again, as in 1957, when the Chollima Movement was launched.

He continuously provided field guidance so as to rouse all the people to a new revolutionary upsurge, and led the young people to play the role of vanguard and shock brigade in flaring up the flames of the great revolutionary upsurge and developing the Chollima Workteam Movement.

Based on the achievements and experiences gained in economic construction the President gave fresh solutions to the theoretical problems of the socialist economy and pushed ahead with the struggle to achieve the socialist industrialization.

Thanks to his wise leadership and energetic efforts of the Korean people, many miracles and innovations were made in all fields of the economic construction and defence building to the wonder of the world.

The establishment of the comprehensively-developed independent modern industry with the latest technology improved the country’s industry, and the self-supporting defence industry was created amid the dynamic drive to expedite the defence building.
The tasks of overall technical reconstruction were carried out in all sectors of the national economy, including industry and agriculture.

Thanks to the energetic guidance of the President, the task of industrialization was successfully accomplished in the DPRK in the short period of only 14 years, despite difficult conditions and environment, thus turning it into a powerful socialist industrial state with modern industry and developed rural economy.

President Kim Il Sung called on the Korean people to make continuous innovations and advance at the Fifth Congress of the WPK held in November 1970. He pushed forward the struggle to carry out the three major tasks of the technological revolution aimed at freeing the working people from heavy labour and legally cement the state and social system on the basis of the political and ideological unity of all the people.

While channelling great efforts into strengthening the people’s power organs and putting the national economy on a Juche-oriented, modern and scientific footing, the President paid close attention to developing the socialist culture.

He ensured that the universal 11-year compulsory education was introduced throughout the country from 1975 and the system of bringing up all children at state and public expense consolidated by law the following year, and made public Theses on Socialist Education in September 1977, thus bringing about a radical change in educational work.

He directed close attention to the all-round flourishing and development of art and literature, and took measures to consolidate and develop the universal free medical care system which had been in force since the days of war so as to protect and promote the health of the working people and children.

He put forth the self-defensive military line of turning the whole army into an army of cadres, modernizing it, arming all the people and fortifying the whole country and wisely led the efforts for the implementation, further consolidating the self-reliant defence capabilities with which to frustrate the moves of aggression forces.

By setting the modelling of the whole society on the Juche idea as the general task of the Korean revolution at the Sixth Congress of the WPK held in October 1980, the President energetically led the efforts to realize the independence of the working people by training all members of society into Juche-type revolutionaries and transforming all aspects of social life in conformity with the requirements of the Juche idea.

He made sure that general line for building socialism and the socialist and collectivist principles were held fast to and thoroughly implemented so that socialism in the DPRK emerged victorious, fully displaying its advantage and invincible vitality.

Immortal exploits of President Kim Il Sung, who established the people-centred socialism, the socialist state which is independent, self-sufficient and self-reliant in defence, and ushered in a most powerful and prosperous era in the 5 000-year-long history of the Korean nation, will be handed down through generations.

The Korean people call President Kim Il Sung “our leader” with affection even today, which is the expression of their boundless reverence for the father of the nation, who was endowed with love for the people and devoted his whole life to them.

President Kim Il Sung gave foremost prominence to the people in his thoughts and activities in the whole course of his revolutionary career. His noble idea of always attaching importance to the aspirations, demands and interests of the people was thoroughly applied to all the lines and policies put forth by him at every stage of the Korean revolution and all the laws and measures adopted by the state.

As the first step towards enforcing democratic reforms after Korea’s liberation (August 15, 1945) from the Japanese military occupation, he promulgated the agrarian reform law to realize the centuries-old wish of the peasants for their own land. And during the fierce days of the Fatherland Liberation War (June 25, 1950-July 27, 1953) he had a decision of the DPRK Cabinet on enforcing the universal free medical care system adopted.

As he regarded the misfortune and pain suffered by the people as his own and felt the worth and delight of his life in defending the destiny of the people and bringing happiness to them, he continued his field guidance tours throughout his life in order to provide his beloved people with an affluent and cultured life.

Such traces of his leadership are found in every nook and corner of the country. Among them is a rough sloping field on which he walked with a torch in his hand on a sleeting night, saying that he would be willingly exposed to rain or snow if his people could eat polished rice. And a far-flung island in the West Sea of Korea tells a moving story about the affection of him, who readily walked through the muddy tracks so as to provide his people with better cloth.

Becoming the benevolent father responsible for the livelihood of all the families in the country, the President was on his on-site guidance trip on Sundays, holidays and even his birthdays.

Though he felt much exhausted from his work, he always met people wearing a bright smile on his face.

One September day in 1991 he climbed up a 1,500-metre-high mountain in the windy weather to see a crop field managed by a Korean People’s Army unit.

The commanding officer of the unit, who had always seen the President full of great vigour, was surprised to see him walking with a stick.

Saying to the officer on the edge of tears that he was in good health, the President told an accompanying official to put his stick away before others would see it. He continued to say that as he felt quite good, he took the stick for show, which upset the soldiers on

In the last period of his life he visited a cooperative farm in the western part of the country, and it was June 19, 1994, Sunday. That day he walked along the lanes across the fields, leaving his stick in the car not to make his people worry about his health.

When meeting workers, he held their grease-stained hands and in a rural village, had friendly talks with the peasants at the edge of a field. When talking to children, he became a child and to the elderly, their intimate friend; he cared for their innermost thoughts as a meticulous mother would do.

President Kim Il Sung, who devoted his whole life for the people with ardent love for them, will live for ever in the hearts of the Korean people as their benevolent father and the sun of the nation.

President Kim Il Sung regarded the national reunification as his lifelong cause and devoted his all to its realization.

When Korea was subjected to the national and territorial division by the foreign forces after the Second World War, the President, who was more unhappy about it than anybody else, set up a firm milestone for independent national reunification and roused all the Korean compatriots to the national reunification movement and the achievement of great national unity.

Having made it the principle of great national unity to subordinate everything to the cause of national reunification, transcending the differences in ideas, ideals, political views and religious beliefs, he united all the people aspiring after reunification with great generosity and broad magnanimity.

At a critical time in the latter half of the 1940s when the danger of territorial division was imminent owing to the manoeuvres of the separatist forces at home and abroad, he unfolded a grand plan of achieving the national reunification on the strength of great national unity and thus proposed convening a joint conference to be attended by all the political parties, public organizations and patriotic individuals from all walks of life in the north and the south.

In compliance with his proposal, the historic Joint Conference of Representatives of the Political Parties and Public Organizations in North and South Korea was held in Pyongyang in April 1948. The April north-south joint conference was a significant meeting that demonstrated the validity and vitality of the policy on the independent national reunification put forward by the President and firmly rallied broad patriotic forces behind him.

In the whole course of leading the revolution and construction the President always gave attention to the reunification issue and ensured that every line or policy was worked out in close combination with the reunification issue and in accordance with the demands and interests of the nation.

With a keen insight into the daily...
Kim Il Sung guiding the Joint Conference of Representatives of the Political Parties and Public Organizations in North and South Korea (April 1948)

Kim Il Sung meeting the South Korean delegation to the inter-Korean high-level political talks and advancing the three principles for national reunification (May 1972)

Amid the great expectation of the entire nation, the first session of the Red Cross talks between the north and the south of Korea took place in Pyongyang from August 30 to September 2, 1972

A direct telephone line was installed between the north and the south, and the trial call made for the first time after the territorial division.
The growing desire of the nation for reunification and rapidly changing internal and external situations in the early 1970s, he opened up a new phase for the reunification movement by putting forth a policy for wide-ranging negotiation between the north and the south and the three principles for national reunification.

The three principles for national reunification clarified by the President in May 1972 are, in essence, to achieve the national reunification independently without reliance on outside forces and free from their interference and peacefully without recourse to arms, and promote great national unity transcending the differences in ideas, ideals and systems.

The North-South Joint Statement with the three principles for national reunification as the basic content was published on July 4 that year. The publication of the joint statement won full support and approval from the entire nation and the national reunification movement advanced more vigorously under the banner of independence, peaceful reunification and great national unity.

In the Sixth Congress of the Workers’ Party of Korea held in October 1980 the President advanced a proposal on founding the Democratic Federal Republic of Korea, thereby elucidating the basic way to reunify the country fairly and smoothly on the condition that the north and the south recognize and tolerate each other’s ideas and systems and giving further spur to the struggle of the entire nation for national reunification.
Reunification.

When the anti-reunification manoeuvres of the separatist forces at home and abroad created complicated and difficult situations in the early 1990s, the President wisely led the effort to implement the line of national reunification.

Thanks to his lofty idea of great national unity and ennobling love for the nation, the Pan-National Alliance for Korea’s Reunification was established in 1990 as an association embracing all the pro-reunification patriotic forces of the Koreans in the north, south and overseas.

In 1993, when the situation in the Korean peninsula, which had been advancing towards détente through contacts and dialogues between the north and the south, became aggravated owing to the vicious anti-DPRK, anti-reunification moves of the outside forces and its followers, the President put forward the Ten-point Programme of the Great Unity of the Whole Nation for the Reunification of the Country to raise the work of achieving great national unity onto a new high.

The programme, which set it as the general objective to found a unified state, independent, peaceful and neutral, evoked an enthusiastic support and approval from all the Korean compatriots in the north, south and abroad for its justness and practicability.

As they were guided by great principles for national reunification clarified by President Kim Il Sung, the Korean people waged briskly the national reunification movement with clear objective and orientations, and great confidence and courage.

Endowed with warm love for his fellow countrymen, President Kim Il Sung took warm care of the Korean compatriots suffering from misfortune and pain.

In September 1984 when several hundred thousand people in south Korea were made flood victims, he ensured that relief goods were sent to them. So, 50 000 sok of rice (one sok equals about 140 kg–Tr.), 100 000 tons of cement, 500 000 metres of cloth, and large quantities of medicines were sent, the first time in nearly 40 years of Korea’s division.

Even at the last moment of his revolutionary career, the President reviewed the historic document related with the great illumination of the Path of Independent Reunification.
Thanks to the energetic leadership of President Kim Il Sung, the lodestar of national reunification, the Korean people advanced the national reunification movement straight forward under the unfurled banner of independence despite the complicated international situation, smashing vicious separatist moves of hostile forces.

As long as they have the immortal exploits President Kim Il Sung performed in accomplishing the cause of national reunification, revolutionary activities of Chairman Kim Jong Il to implement the President’s lifetime instructions and wise leadership of General Secretary Kim Jong Un, who carries forward the ideas and cause of the great leaders, the Korean people will surely realize their reunification cause.

Not only the Korean people but also the progressive peoples of the world respect President Kim Il Sung as a benevolent father and an outstanding leader of the cause of independence of mankind.

The 20th century witnessed revolutionary changes unprecedented in the struggle of the masses of the people for their independence and the fiercest struggle between progressives and reactionaries, between socialism and imperialism.

In this stirring century, President Kim Il Sung authored the Juche idea as the guiding ideology of the era and, based on it, presented original revolutionary theories with which to dynamically propel the cause of independence of the people.

Now the world people praise that the President’s Juche idea and the revolutionary theories which are its embodiments represent the whole period of the history of implementing the cause of independence including its present and future.

President Kim Il Sung upheld the banner of independence in the whole course of his leadership of the revolution and construction and rendered a great contribution to victoriously advancing the cause of independence of mankind and cause of socialism.

He put forward the slogan “People of the world advocating independence, unite!” and conducted energetic activities to strengthen the unity of the socialist forces and the international communist movement.

Attaching great importance to consolidating friendly relations with socialist countries, he met communist and workers’ party leaders of the world frequently and gave clear answers to the problems arising in achieving unity and cohesion of the international communist movement.

In the mid-20th century when the international socialist movement was teetering on the brink of split, the President firmly maintained a principled and independent stand and ensured that the socialist countries adhered to the principle of unity, thus making a great contribution to safeguarding the socialist camp.

He also gave full support to the efforts of many countries to win their freedom and independence from the fetters of imperialism and colonialism.

Korea, which had suffered from age-old poverty and scores-of-years-long colonial slavery, was reduced to ashes because of the three years of the Fatherland Liberation War, so it was not until the 1950s that it started socialist construction.

However, the President regarded it as a noble international obligation to help Asian, African and Latin American countries which held high the torch of anti-imperialist national-liberation struggle and gave unstinted support and assistance. He ensured that the DPRK established ties of economic cooperation and technical exchange with many countries in agriculture, education, public health and other fields, dispatched technicians and experts, sent materials, money and facilities and gave grant-type aids. Thanks to his contribution, many countries could achieve national liberation and expedite their building of new societies.

With a keen insight into the significance and role of the non-aligned movement in the struggle for global independence, President Kim Il Sung shed the light on the road of its development and wisely led it to take the road to independence.

He saw to it that non-aligned countries promoted close cooperation and unity in all fields, including politics, the economy and culture.
He had agricultural institutes and experimental farms set up in several countries and gave substantial assistance to their industrial and cultural development.

President Kim Il Sung performed outstanding exploits in wisely leading the world socialist movement to overcome severe ordeals and difficulties and advance victoriously in the latter period of the last century.

In the early 1990s, when the imperialists and reactionaries made a fuss about the end of socialism, taking advantage of the collapse of socialism in the former Soviet Union and Eastern European countries, the President met delegations of political parties and social organizations and party leaders of foreign countries, and explained to them the basic reason for the frustration of socialism in some countries and the experience of building socialism in the DPRK on the basis of the Juche Idea, which instilled in them invincibility of socialism and confidence in its victory.

Personifying noble internationalist obligations and comradeship, he wrote a brilliant chapter in the history of revolutionary ethics. He regarded everybody, who shared the purpose on the road for global independence, as genuine comrades and friends in disregard of their nationalities, political views or religious beliefs, and met many personages from all walks of life around the world and representatives of UN and other international organizations, thus promoting peace and friendship. Throughout his life he met a total of over 70,000 foreigners, including 120 odd heads of state, 200 odd party leaders and 70 odd heads of government.

Many statesmen and people of the world extolled great personality and exploits of President Kim Il Sung, who led the trend of the

The Fourth Plenary Meeting of the Eighth Central Committee of the Workers’ Party of Korea held in December last year clarified once again that the supply of school uniforms and things to the students across the country at the state expense is a consistent policy of the Party and the state, and took an important measure of the Party Central Committee for implementing it.

The first nationwide technical workshop was held for the production of new school uniforms, and the teams composed of competent researchers and technicians from the garment research institute of the Academy of Light Industry and the Pyongyang Municipal Garment Industry Management Bureau were dispatched to all parts of the country to pass on techniques.

Officials and the working people in relevant sectors turned out as one in the effort to translate into reality the Party’s love for the younger generation.

With parental affection they devoted their all to ensuring the quality of cloth, school uniforms and school things to satisfy the schoolchildren, the end users.

Socialist emulation drives were conducted at all workplaces and collective innovations made amid the hot wind of displaying the spirit with which a shift assists the next one and a skilled worker helps a novice.
Thanks to the strenuous efforts of the officials and working people in the light industry sector, all the new students across the country were given new school uniforms, bags and shoes, with the new school year just at hand.

Looking at the delighted children in new school uniforms and bags, their parents expressed the gratitude to the Workers’ Party of Korea which brings children’s laughter into full bloom with noble affection for the younger generation.
