Haeju citizens received the medicines sent by the Party Central Committee, which sets it as the most important issue to safeguard the life and safety of the people and goes closer to the people suffering difficulties to share weal and woe with them.
Kim Il Sung and Chollima Movement

The Chollima Movement initiated by President Kim Il Sung and carried out under his wise leadership was an all-people movement to sweep away everything old-fashioned from all spheres of the economy, culture, ideology and morality, and constantly make innovations and accelerate socialist construction.

Chollima means a steed running one thousand "ri" (one "ri" equals about 393 metres-Tr.) a day.

Such a legendary horse became the symbol of a great mass movement, the Chollima Movement, which was launched in the latter half of the 1950s, the most difficult period in the development history of the DPRK, and brought about miraculous changes in several economic sectors.

The world’s people associated the Chollima Movement with outstanding and seasoned leadership of President Kim Il Sung, the genius of creation and construction, and highly praised the DPRK as Chollima Korea.
As July comes around, the Korean people are filled with stronger yearnings for President Kim Il Sung. When the Korean people had to conduct socialist construction under difficult conditions—everything was in short supply and they were in constant confrontation with the imperialists—they could perform miraculous achievements at every stage and in each period of socialist construction thanks to the outstanding and seasoned leadership of the President who inspired them to make great creations and upsurges.

In December 1956, when the country had to undergo harsh trials, the President encouraged the working class at the then Kangson Steel Plant to bring about a great revolutionary upsurge, the Chollima era. The plenary meeting of the Central Committee of the Workers’ Party of Korea held in December that year had called on the workers at the plant to produce 10,000 tons of steel more than planned. However, they had been grooping for the ways of carrying out the task until the President visited them on December 28.

That day the President convened a consultative meeting of the leading officials and exemplary workers at the plant and said to them earnestly in the following vein: We are unable to manufacture more... machines and build more dwelling houses and factories for want of steel. Workers in the machine-building industry sector say if they are provided adequately with steel, they can carry out next year’s plan easily. The December Plenary Meeting of the Party Central Committee called upon the workers of the Kangson Steel Plant to produce 10,000 tons more of steel next year than planned. If you do this, it will greatly help the country.

In hearty response to his call, the workers of the plant turned out as one to effect a great upsurge in the steel production by tapping all latent reserves and making maximum use of equipment and waging technical innovation drive. They thus wrought a miracle of producing 120,000 tons of structural steel using a blooming mill with an annual rated capacity of only 60,000 tons.

Inspired by the miraculous achievement of the working class of Kangson who kindled the first torch of the grand Chollima march, other working people across the country effected great upsurges on all fronts of economic construction under the revolutionary slogan “Let us dash forward at the speed of Chollima!” put forth by the President.

In the course of this, the great Chollima movement started and the country carried out a historical task of socialist industrialization in a short span of 14 years.

Later a workteam leader of the Kangson Steel Plant said to a foreign reporter visiting the DPRK, recollecting those days: All our workers were greatly impressed by the trust the President showed on us, unburdening himself of difficult situations facing the country. So we turned out as one to prove ourselves worthy of his trust, and this started the Chollima movement.

Another worker said that they were so excited when the President sat together with them ordinary workers to discuss the state affairs and they hardly fought back their tears at his deep trust in them.

It is said that a special quality common to prominent statesmen in world history is to motivate the masses of the people. However,
The Chollima Workteam Movement launched at the Kangson Steel Plant expanded throughout the country.

Kim Il Sung meeting Jin Ung Won, pioneer of the Chollima Workteam Movement (October 1960)

“ONE FOR ALL, ALL FOR ONE!”

Jin Ung Won-led workteam at the Kangson Steel Plant was the first to win the title of the Chollima Workteam in March 1959 by making collective innovation in production and giving full play to the collectivist traits of helping each other in study and life.
no other statesmen have displayed the great ability comparable to the President in terms of the character of the leadership, and its period, scope and depth. Mass movements initiated and conducted under the outstanding leadership of President Kim Il Sung serve as a source of the giant strength the Korean people have been displaying generation after generation.

In 1958 workers of Kiyang manufactured the first Chollima tractor in 35 days, smashing mysticism about technology and conservatism.

In 1958 workers of Tokchon turned out a Sungni-58 truck within 40 days.

Workers at the West Pyongyang Railway Factory manufactured by their own efforts the first Pulpungi electric locomotive in 1961.

The construction workers of Pyongyang built over 20,000 flats with the materials and funds for 7,000 flats in one year, thus creating the Pyongyang speed during the great Chollima upsurge.

Railway workers laid in only 75 days 80 km of standard-gauge railway lines between Haeju and Hasong.

Workers of Ryongsong manufactured a 3,000-ton press for the first time in the country.

In the flames of the grand Chollima upsurge new miracles and amazing speed were created in several sectors of socialist construction.
The Victorious Fatherland Liberation War Museum, which stands on the bank of the picturesque Pothong River in Pyongyang, is dedicated to undying exploits of President Kim Il Sung, who led two revolutionary wars against the US and Japanese imperialists to victory, and Chairman Kim Jong Il, who achieved one victory after another in the war to defend socialism.

The heroic Korean People’s Army made marked achievements in the battle of liberating Taejon by capturing Commander Dean of the US Army’s 24th Infantry Division, killing or capturing other 24,220 enemies, and destroying many weapons and other combat equipment.
On display in the captured weapons exhibition area are the weapons and other combat equipment of the enemy destroyed or captured in the battles during and after the war. Pueblo, an armed spy ship of the US, which had violated the territorial waters of the DPRK and perpetrated acts of espionage, forgetting the bitter lessons of the Korean war, was captured on January 23, 1968 by the KPA navy. It is now moored on the Pothong River.
War is not conducted by means of rifles and guns alone. There were not only soldiers but also announcers who dedicated themselves to hastening the victory in the war, burning their hearts with ardent love for their own and fierce hatred for the aggressors, during the Fatherland Liberation War (June 1950-July 1953).

When the war was unleashed by the armed invasion of the United States and south Korean puppet regime, Ri Sang Byok, People’s Announcer of the Radio-Television Broadcasting Committee of the DPRK, took part in the war as an announcer. He went to Seoul, which was liberated by the Korean People’s Army just three days after the start of war, and read the congratulatory message sent by President Kim Il Sung to all the Korean people, the People’s Army and Seoul citizens on the occasion of the liberation of Seoul. At that time he was 26.

Ri Sang Byok, Ri Jong Nam and other announcers never discontinued their broadcasting activities during the strategic, temporary retreat of the KPA in the autumn of 1950, thereby encouraging the people and soldiers to retain unyielding confidence and fight courageously in defence of every inch of the country.

Loud, vigorous voices of the announcers singing the immortal revolutionary hymn _Song of General Kim Il Sung_ and reading the news from the Supreme Headquarters of the Korean People’s Army demonstrated to the whole world the mettle of the heroic Korean people fighting against the US-led world imperialist aggressors.

History records the announcers who made distinguished services to achieving victory in the Fatherland Liberation War by grasping microphones as their weapons and broadcasting the news about the fighting Korea.
The news of the KPA Supreme Headquarters were broadcast uninterruptedly day and night, instilling confidence in victory and hostility against enemy in the service personnel on the front and the people in the rear.

Ri Jong Yong announced the liberation of Pyongyang by the second advance of the KPA, and Paek Jong Son, girl announcer, struck terror into the enemy by her active broadcasting activities.

Jon Kum Son, People’s Announcer, is well remembered as a wartime meritorious person, as she took part in the broadcasting of the news of the KPA Supreme Headquarters since 1952 and greatly inspired the soldiers and people with her resonant voice and distinctive narration.

Among the war announcers were also Pak Jong Mo, Kim Ok Hwan, Pang Ul Mang and Jo Chun Yon. Finally on July 27, 1953 the news of victory in the Fatherland Liberation War was broadcast on the Korean Central Radio.

Nearly 70 years have elapsed since the end of war, and distinguished services of war announcers who inspired the entire people to achieve victory in the war are still remembered.

Ri Sang Byok, announcer of the Radio-Television Broadcasting Committee of the DPRK, acted as a war announcer in the whole period of the Fatherland Liberation War. He broadcast the news of the KPA Supreme Headquarters, thus inspiring all the soldiers and people with confidence in victory.

Ri Sang Byok read at the Seoul Broadcasting Station the congratulatory message sent by President Kim Il Sung to all the Korean people, the People’s Army and Seoul citizens on the occasion of the liberation of Seoul. At that time he was 26.

Jon Kum Son, announcer of the Radio-Television Broadcasting Committee of the DPRK, read the news of the KPA Supreme Headquarters and other important news.
From the words broadcast by Paek Jong Son, encouraging the People’s Army soldiers in the battle to attack Height 351 in early June 1953

Pak Jong Mo, Kim Ok Hwan, Pang Ul Mang, and Jo Chun Yon, who continued wartime broadcast even in the fierce bombings.

“Combatants of the 5th Company! The respected Supreme Commander Kim Il Sung is waiting for the report of victory. Your parents, wives and children, and the fatherland are watching over us. Charge bravely. Let’s win 15 minutes, just 15 minutes. Destroy the aggressors!”

People’s Army soldiers and people listening to the military achievements of the KPA units broadcast by announcers.

Commemoration
The combatants in the medical sector of the Korean People’s Army who have turned out in the campaign against the malicious virus infection, true to the noble outlook of the Workers’ Party of Korea on the people, are creditably discharging their mission as defenders of people’s happiness.

Since they were committed to the emergency anti-epidemic front to control the public health crisis created in the capital city of Pyongyang on the special order of the WPK Central Committee in mid-May, the KPA medics have been conducting the supply of medicines for residential quarters, families and individuals in conformity with the ongoing anti-epidemic situation and under detailed plans while paying close attention to the management of the medicines associated with the Party’s benevolent affection.

They are engaged in the medicine supply at pharmacies for 24 hours every day, giving helpful advices to the visitors and offering medical assistance to the patients in the districts under their charge.

Devoted services of the KPA medics, sharing weal and woe with the people and rendering wholehearted support to them in such a difficult time, are greatly encouraging the citizens to regain the vigour of life.

Unstinted praise for the defenders of the security of the country and people is ringing throughout the city.

In Defence of People’s Safety

Fifty odd days have passed since the combatants in the medical sector of the Korean People’s Army were committed to the anti-epidemic campaign, true to their mission of reliably guarding the frontline position in defence of the people.

Their devoted services have further cemented the absolute and immutable trust of the people in the Workers’ Party of Korea and brought the vigour of life back to many families.
The KPA medics creditably performing their honourable mission as defenders of the people in the anti-epidemic war to safeguard the security of the capital city, and life and health of the people.
Feelings of kinship between the army and the people have been deepened during the anti-epidemic campaign.
A new residential district rose in downtown Pyongyang, the capital city of the DPRK, adding more to the beautiful scenery of the Pothong riverside. The Pothong Riverside Terraced Houses District with harmonious layout of terraced, multi- and low-storeyed houses and welfare service facilities, in which formative art, practicability and convenience are ensured at the highest level, was created as a new model of the residential district construction.

Last April exemplary labour innovators, meritorious persons, scientists, educationists, literary persons and other working people in Pyongyang moved into luxuriously furnished houses in Kyongru-dong, Central District. The architectural spectacle created along the Pothong River is another materialization of the consistent policy of the Workers’ Party of Korea to make the people supporting the Party and the state with their painstaking efforts enjoy the best civilization before anybody else, considering that their dedication of sweat and conscience to the sake of the country is more valuable than a thousand pieces of gold.

The site had been originally occupied by the residence of President Kim Il Sung. General Secretary Kim Jong Un, who carries forward invariably the noble intention “The people are God” of President Kim Il Sung and Chairman Kim Jong II, made a decision of constructing dwelling houses for the people there and gave detailed guidance over it, examining more than 240 blueprints in a little over a month and visiting the construction site several times. True to his intention, soldier-builders and officials worked heart and soul in the... whole course of the construction of the district.

The General Secretary attended the inauguration ceremony and congratulated the owners of new houses, saying that the President would have been satisfied to see the cozy dwellings built for the patriots and persons of merit in the place where his residence had once been located, feeling as if he had warmly embraced his people whom he had loved so much all his life.

Looking up at his benevolent image all the people in the country felt more keenly that he is identical with the President and the Chairman.

New dwellers of Kyongru-dong are beside themselves with delight.

Choe Hong Gi and Ho Myong Gum, couple of Merited Drivers of the Ryonmot Trolley Bus Station

Hardly we sleep at night in the new house amply furnished with furniture and household things, feeling as if we were just married. What worries us is that we would fail to do more work, too contended with our happiness.

Kim Yong Nam, ranger of the Forestry Management Station under Mangyongdae District People’s Committee

The dawn redwood which President Kim Il Sung personally planted and cultivated in his residence is near my house. When I hear the rustling sounds of its green leaves, it seems that the President asks me tenderly whether I like the new house and wishes me happiness.

Kim Yong Hui, worker of the Central Zoo

When my relatives, colleagues and former neighbours visit my new house, they are very envious of me and wish they would share my fortune with them. I like my house.

Kim Yong Sun, worker of Central District Landscaping and Greening Station

I am very overwhelmed by the fact that my family received a large, five-roomed flat without carrying even a spadeful of sand for the construction. My husband says that he wants to repay the benevolence of the country by helping me in work even after the retirement from his building career.
Choe Sun Hui, worker of the Central District Roads and Facilities Maintenance Station

When I was in my 30s, I moved to Pyongyang with my husband. We were given a three-room flat and brought up three children there. Today I see my grandchildren growing up happily in this deluxe house.

Kim Yong Il, Merited Engine Driver of the West Pyongyang Locomotive Corps under the Pyongyang Railway Bureau

Whenever I passed the site of construction of the residential district in full swing, I thought that the country had magnificent houses being built for such ordinary people as me. At that time I never dreamt that one of them was for me.
Skyscrapers in Pyongyang

On Mirae Scientists Street extending along the bank of the Taedong River in Pyongyang is an architectural structure resembling the orbital path of an electron and boasting of its unique and excellent artistic and formative beauty. It is the 53-storeyed apartment, a symbol of the street, built in 2015.

A skyscraping apartment building is on Songhwa Street which was completed last April, transforming the Songsin and Songhwa areas in eastern Pyongyang beyond recognition. The soaring structure with 80 storeys looks grandiose when one gets closer to it, and it resembles a full-bloom blossom when seen from above. Occupying a total floor space of over 160 000 square metres, the skyscraper houses nearly 900 flats.

There are several towering buildings on Ryomyong Street that was completed in 2017 assuming a wonderful appearance as an energy-saving and green street. Among them is the 70-storeyed apartment building that occupies a total floor space of over 120 000 square metres. Its dwellers as well as other skyscraping apartment buildings on the street are the lecturers of Kim Il Sung University, the highest institute of Juche-based science and education. A shopping mall is laid out on the mezzanine linking the 70-storeyed building and the neighbouring 55-storeyed apartment building.

Kwangbok Area Supermarket in Mangyongdae District of Pyongyang is attracting a growing number of people.

Various counters laid out on the first floor are always buzzing with customers buying a wide variety of foods, fish, fruits and vegetables produced in the capital city and other provinces across the country. They are mostly women from not only Phalgol-and Tangsang-dong and other residential quarters in the district, but also other parts of the city.

A housewife from Chukjon-dong No. 1 in Mangyongdae District says, “I frequent here, because it always satisfies my demand with an abundant stock of goods and I enjoy choosing goods with many people.”

Unlike the foodstuff counters, the opposite counters selling cosmetics and flowers seem more attractive to men, who readily purchase cosmetics of such famous brands as Unhasu, Pomhyanggi and Kumgangsan for their beloved wives or girlfriends.

Up on the second floor the counters of garments, household goods and souvenirs tempt customers, who, with help from kind assistants, choose goods to their likings in style and colour.

The dining space with several hundred seats on the third floor is another crowd-puller in the supermarket, where people enjoy delicious dishes while seeing cooks preparing them on the spot.
Thanks to strenuous efforts of the employees to improve their service activities, the supermarket is winning popularity among the people.

Various commuting vehicles, such as trains, buses and boats, are in operation for students in mountainous counties of Ryanggang and Jagang provinces, as they have to travel a long distance to and from schools in the residential areas.

Those in several villages in Tongsin County, Jagang Province, commute to schools by boats.

Some ten years ago, when the construction project of the Huichon Power Station started, several villages, hospitals, schools and other institutions in the county had to evacuate. Dams were built and the water level of the Chongchon River, which flows from east to west in the county, rose, forming a large artificial lake along several villages including Tonggwan and Kyonghung, and submerging some existing roads.

As it caused the students in the areas to walk longer distances to school, the state took the measure to run school boats for them.

At present, over a hundred students of the Tonggwan and Kyonghung senior middle schools and two branch schools around the lake commute to schools by boat.

Every morning, quays at the lakeside villages are crowded with students getting on board the boat.

The boats stop even for one or two students, and new boats started their voyages two years ago.

Seeing the school boats with schoolchildren singing and laughing merrily on board, the villagers feel grateful for the beneficial measures taken by the state for their children.

The North Hamgyong Provincial Tree Nursery, which was inaugurated together with the Jungphyong Vegetable Greenhouse Farm in December three years ago, is located in the Jungphyong area of Kyongsong County, North Hamgyong Province. With an area of scores of hectares, it has several blocks of modern plastic panel greenhouses, outdoor cultivation ground, seed gathering ground, circular cutting bed, seed selection and sowing ground, sapling storehouse and other facilities.

Now all officials and employees of the tree nursery are making strenuous effort to fulfil their responsibility of turning all the mountains in the province into “gold” and “treasure” mountains. They have fully prepared different raw materials including organic fertilizer, light substrate and floating vermiculite and small farm equipment needed for sapling production so as to accelerate production.

By running the modernly-built integrated production system effectively, maintaining scrupulous management of automated equipment and increasing the rate of their operation, they ensure necessary conditions for the growth of saplings such as temperature, humidity and sunshine ratio.

Work to prevent natural disasters is also going on according to a well thought-out plan. The officials and technicians inspect every workplace to find out any possible defects and take appropriate countermeasures immediately. Especially, they pay special attention to ensuring proper growth of saplings at outdoor plots by setting up awnings in

They have intensified the preventive observation of pests and nutritious management of saplings according to the scientific and technological requirements.

Thanks to their efforts, the tree nursery overfulfilled the sapling production plan in the first half of this year.

Okryu Restaurant, a public catering establishment located in the scenic spot on the bank of the picturesque Taedong River, was inaugurated in August 1960.

At first it comprised a building crowned with bluish hip-saddle roof, occupying a total building space of some 5,000 square metres. Afterwards, it underwent reconstruction and expansion several times, and now it has two annexes, and delicacy and branch restaurants.

The restaurant housing banqueting halls, dining halls and other rooms with several thousand seats is capable of catering for 10,000 people every day.

Among the DPRK sportspersons who have won gold medals in international competitions and exalted dignity and honour of the country is Sin Kum Dan, woman athlete.

Sin was very fond of sports, especially running, since she was young. While working as a lathe operator at the Huichon Machine-tool Factory, she continued to do physical exercise.

She showed her talent for the first time at a sports game held at the factory on May Day in 1958. At that time she breasted the finishing tapes in 100-metre and 400-metre races.

With the event as a momentum, Sin started her running career the following autumn.

As she had lacked basic training, she intensified training with redoubled efforts.

During the winter of 1958-1959, she ran on the sawdust tracks for three hours or more every day. In February alone, she ran a total distance of 199 kilometres in training. She also repeated running 200 metres in 34-35 seconds 12 times a day, which surpassed the norm of training of the famous male athletes.

Her indomitable spirit and perseverance paid off after several months, when she set a new national record.

She also cut a conspicuous figure in international games since 1960. In July that year she won her first gold medal and set a new world record in the 800-metre race at the Znamensky Brothers Prize International Athletics Tournament held in the former Soviet Union.

She won consecutive gold medals and renewed the world records at international games, including the aforementioned tournament held the following year and the first GANEFO (Games for the New Emerging Forces) held in Jakarta, Indonesia, in November 1963.

Sin was recognized as a star in the world athletic field in the 1960s, for she set eleven new world records and won many medals, including 28 golds, in international games.

She was awarded the title of People’s Athlete of the DPRK in October 1966.
After retiring from playing career, she acted as a coach and trained a large number of athletes. She won the Kim Il Sung Prize in 1972.

In spite of her advanced age, she still devotes her wisdom and effort to the development of sports science.

Janggo dance is a folk dance of Korea with a long history. Janggo (hourglass-shaped drum), a national percussion instrument, was called yogo in the days of the Three Kingdoms (mid-3rd century BC–AD mid-7th century). Depicted in the paintings in the tombs Nos. 4 and 5 of the five mural tombs of Koguryo found in Jian, China, were the people dancing with janggo.

The dance has its origin in the soljanggo dance, a part of peasant dance. Soljanggo, smaller than janggo, was widely used in the peasant dance which was played to either wish for or celebrate a bumper crop in rural areas. Soljanggo beaters moving their shoulders and arms merrily to the rhythmic tune rendered an active contribution to enlivening the atmosphere, and the dance gradually developed into an independent dance form.

As janggo beaters were mostly men in the early days, the dance was mainly played by them. Afterwards, it was rapidly distributed among women. Men's janggo dance looks just liberal and brisk while women's looking gentle, elegant and stylish.

Dance with janggo is strong in its tune and worth seeing for a harmonious combination of various beating techniques and dance movements. Janggo dance, which has long been enjoyed and widely played in Korea, is being carried forward and developing in form and content thanks to the state policy on the preservation of national heritage. It is now played as either solo or duet dance, and sometimes as group dance.

When several hundred performers dance with janggo, the audience would feast their eyes on the spectacular sight, enjoying noble and beautiful traditions and emotional life of the Korean nation.
Old paintings showing the history of janggo dance

Janggo dance, together with peasant dance, was a favourite of the Korean people. A mural painting in the tomb of Koguryo proves the fact that the Korean people danced with yogo, similar to janggo, during the days of the Three Kingdoms.
Janggo dance is played as either a solo or a group dance. The solo dance is featured by various dancing techniques and movements of a hero, while the group one by harmonious ensemble of brisk and liberal movements of dancers.

On the bank of the Taedong River flowing through downtown Pyongyang is Moran Hill famous for its peculiar topography and superb scenic beauty.

The hill was named so because it looks like a just blown peony blossom (moran in Korean-Tr.). Along with its picturesque scenery, it boasts an abundance of historical sites related with the history of Pyongyang spanning over a thousand years.

Koguryo (277 BC-AD 668), known as the most powerful state in the Korean history, moved its capital to Pyongyang (around Mt Taesong) in the early 5th century. In the mid-6th century it built the Walled City of Pyongyang, 16km in circumference, encompassing the present Moran Hill and other areas. In the Moran Hill area were located the inner and northern walls, which served as an imperial palace and its defence wall respectively.

Still found in the hill are the remains of the walls and old structures, such as...
Ulmil, Choesung and Pubyok pavilions, and Chilsong, Jongum, Hyonmu and Tongam gates.

The Ulmil Pavilion was built as the northern command post in the inner wall of the Walled City of Pyongyang and was rebuilt in 1714. Its 11-metre-high embankment built of squarely trimmed stones is stepwise in the lower part and narrows inwardly toward the top, thus looking higher, grand and safe.

The Choesung Pavilion on the summit of the hill blends well with the picturesque scenery.

The Chilsong Gate, the northern gate of the inner wall, was rebuilt in the days of Koryo (918-1392) and several times again afterwards. Walls are some 10 metres apart and the gate is placed on them crosswise. The outer wall juts out to serve as a defence wall. On the embankment built with trimmed stones is placed an arch, and there is a sloped passage in front of the gate.

The Jongum Gate in the lower part of the Chongnyu Cliff on the Taedong River is concealed from view as it was built at a right angle to the walls passing each other.

The Hyonmu Gate, the northern gate of the Walled City of Pyongyang, was rebuilt in 1714. It was built at a right angle to the wall which is erected between the peaks, where the Choesung Pavilion and the Ulmil Pavilion stand respectively, and crosses on the lowest position.

The Pubyok Pavilion was an accessory building of the Yongmyong Temple, a Buddhist temple erected in 393, even before the construction of the Walled City of Pyongyang. The pavilion on the Chongnyu Cliff presents a superb scenery in harmony with the surrounding topographical features.

The viewing of the moon from the Pubyok Pavilion is so wonderful that it is included in the eight scenic spots of Pyongyang.

The original building was burnt down by Japanese invaders during the Imjin Patriotic War (1592-1598) and the present one was built in 1614.

There are also the site of the Yongmyong Temple, the octagonal, five-storeyed pagoda and other historical relics under good preservation in the hill. They are attracting many people who are fascinated by the time-honoured history of the Korean nation.
